MOTORISTS AWAIT OPENING OF BRIDGE AT CALVERT STREET

Span Closed to Traffic
While Numerous Repairs
Are Being Completed.

Residents of Chevy Chase, Cleveland Park, and other communities north of Calvert street, motoring to town, are looking forward to the completion of the repair work on the Calvert street bridge.

For the past two months at least, that structure has been closed to automotive traffic, because of the extensive work being done on it, including the laying of a concrete floor. This has necessitated a detour across the beautiful Million-Dollar Bridge of approximately 10 miles for those motorists desiring to shop at the Loop or at Eighteenth and Columbia roads. This section, the heart of the upper northwest, can only be reached from the north side of the big bridge by the Wyoming avenue, the Columbia road, and then along Columbia road for blocks to Eighteenth street.

However, motorists who begrudgingly give the extra time it takes to travel there in a year's time, the beautiful span are well repaid, for the scenery can hardly be duplicated within the limits of the Capital City.

The problem of the comparative safety of having the poles, carrying the overhead wires for the street car lines, in the center of the street or along the sides of the street has reached considerable moment in District government circles.

In the northwest section of the city are urging that the center poles be removed and replaced by poles at the side. These associations insist that the center poles increase the traffic danger.

National authorities on traffic, however, are being quoted by District officials to prove that the division of traffic on a street, provided the street is wide enough, is conducive to safety and reduces the number of accidents.

Both arguments are being weighed by the officials of the Public Utilities Commission in an effort to arrive at a policy for use in case of further extensions of the street car lines in the suburban sections where the conduit system does not prevail.

Miss Joan Grayson, of the National Woman's party, is spending a short time in New York.

Attorney Alexander Wolf, of 2653 Woodley road northwest, is expected to return to Washington about September 10, following an extended tour through England and the continent.

Fireman Ray Robertson, the "little man" of No. 5 engine company, ought to be a salesman. Within the past few weeks he has sold 150 tickets for the baseball game between the fire and police departments.

Dr. Jason Noble Pierce, pastor of the First Congregational Church, Cambridge, is spending the summer in New England. He will resume his pastorate here early in September.

Maj. Gist Blair, 1651 Pennsylvania avenue, is spending the summer at the White Mountains of New Hampshire.

Edson Bradley, 1328 Connecticut avenue, whose palatial home at Thompson's Island has been destroyed by fire, will remain at the island resort.

Mrs. Florence S. Boardman, 1801 P street northwest, is spending the summer at Point au Pic, Canada.

Miss Louise Abell, 255 Tennessee avenue northwest, returned yesterday from a vacation trip to Piney Point, Md.

Managers of downtown movie theaters never are sure that their houses won't be half empty during the week.

No such doubts, however, assail W. T. Moore, manager of the Dumbarton Theater on Wisconsin avenue.

"The same men, women and children come here every night," said Moore, "and so long as I give them good pictures they come steadily."

Miss Bertha Schottler, of Montross, Va., is visiting her sister, Mrs. Jennie Lehman, 2550 Q street southeast. Miss Schottler will return to Montross the early part of next month.

Lieut. Col. Clarence O. Sherritt, superintendent of Public Buildings and Grounds, who has been spending several weeks in Pennsylvania, is expected back at his desk in the Lemon Building shortly.

Attorney Raymond Neudecker, whose offices are in the Fendall Building, has returned from a short business trip to New York.

Mr. and Mrs. Adolph Baer, of 2464 Macomb street northwest, and their young son, have returned from a trip to Ocean View, Va.

George Fleming Moore, editor in chief of the Fellowship Forum, is spending several weeks at his old home in Montgomery County, Ala. Moore will return to Washington early in September.

Albert E. Wild, of Somerville, Mass., is visiting friends in Washington.

Among the happy people found in the District Building is Francis W. Hill, Jr., 2023 Hillier place northwest, assistant corporation counsel, who is reported engaged to Miss Davette C. Picklen, 1823 Baltimore street northwest. The wedding is set for the fall.

Charles J. Bell, president, and Corcoran Thom, vice president of the American Security and Trust Company, are spending their vacations in Nova Scotia.

Lieut. Maitland, of Bolling Field, will leave for New York in a few days to begin work on a plane which will be entered in the Detroit competition. The Curtis plant will be his headquarters.

Six clocks are in view at Wisconsin avenue and M street, and when they are in place, standing outside the Potomac Savings Bank, a huge four-face clock. One with two faces stands a half block away from Charles Schwartz & Son, Jewelers. By October 15,

N. E. BOOTH POLICE TOO ACTIVE TO SUIT SEVERAL RESIDENTS

Petition Protesting Too
Strict Enforcement Being Circulated.

The new police booth at Twenty-second street and Rhode island avenue is a doubtful blessing, according to several citizens of the Northeast.

The booth is an effort by the Metropolitan Police Department to assure better police protection.

Pollmen on duty are entire too active and energetic to suit the householders of the precinct, and consequently they are circulating a petition against them and against a too strict enforcement of the law.

P. J. Newmaker is vociferous in his objection to being arrested while parking for a short time across the street from his home, 2115 Lawrence street northeast, while waiting for his wife. He says a neighbor didn't like the $5 charge imposed upon him for eating his dinner before switching on the lights on his automobile.

A new Sanitary grocery was opened at the corner of Eighteenth and Lawrence streets, a week ago.

P. J. Newmaker will leave Monday for a week's fishing trip to Colonial Beach.
